I DREAMED MY BOY WAS HOME AGAIN.

WORDS AND MUSIC BY CHARLES CARROLL SAWYER.

Lonely, weary, broken hearted,
As I laid me down to sleep,
Thinking of the day we parted,
When you told me not to weep.
Soon I dreamed that peaceful angels
Hovered o'er the battle plain,
Singing songs of joy and gladness,
And my boy was home again.

CHORUS.—How well I know such thoughts of joy—
Such dreams of bliss are vain,
My heart is sad; my tears will flow,
Until my boy is home again.

Tears were changed to loud rejoicings,
Night was turned to endless day!
Loving birds were sweetly singing,
Flowers bloomed in bright array.
Old and young seemed light and cheerful—
Peace seemed everywhere to reign
My poor heart forgot its sorrow,
For my boy was home again.

CHORUS.—How well I know, &c.

But the dream is past; and with it
All my happiness is gone;
Cheerful thoughts of joy have vanished:
I must still in sorrow mourn.
Soon may peace with all its blessings
Our unhappy land reclaim:
Then my tears will cease their flowing
And my boy be home again.

CHORUS.—How well I know, &c.

Select Miscellany.

THE COBBLER.

In the little picturesque village of Duddingstone, near Edinburg, lived a poor and honest mender of boots and shoes, by the name of Robin Rentoul. He had been a cobbler all his days, but to no purpose. He had made nothing at the business, although he had given it a fair trial of fifty or sixty years. To make the meet was the utmost he could do: he therefore bore no great liking to a profession which had done so little for him, and for which he had done so much. His mind, in short, did not go with his work; and it was the interest, as well as duty and pleasure, of his good wife, Janet, to hold him to it (particularly when he had given his word of honor to a customer) by all the arts common to her sex—sometimes by scolding, sometimes by taunting, but oftener—for Janet was a kind hearted creature—by treating him to a thimbleful of aqua-vitæ, which he loved dearly, with its proper accompaniments of bread and cheese.

Although, however, Robin did not keep by the shoes with any good heart he could not be called either a lazy or inefficient man. In everything but cobbling, he took a deep and active interest. In particular, he was a great connoisseur of the weather. Nobody could prophesy snow like Robin, or foretell a black frost. The latter was Robin's delight; for with it came the people of Edinburg to hold their saturnalia on Duddingstone loch, and cobbling, on these occasions, was entirely out of the question. His rickety table, bottle and glass, were then in requisition, for the benefit of curlers and skaters in general, and of himself in particular. But little benefit accrued from these to Robin, although he could always count on one good customer—in himself. On the breaking up of the ice, he regularly found himself poorer than before, and what was worse, with a smaller disposition than ever to work.

It must have been on some occasion of this kind, that strong necessity suggested to Robin a step for the bettering of his fortunes, which was patronized by the legislature of the day, and which he had heard was resorted to by many with success. Robin resolved to try the lottery.—With thirty shillings, which he had kept in an old stocking for the landlord, he went to Edinburgh, and purchased a sixteenth. This proceeding he determined to keep a profund secret from every one; but whisky cannot tolerate secrets; the first half-mutchkin with barber Hugh succeeded in ejecting it; and as the barber had every opportunity, as well as disposition, to spread it, the circumstance was soon known to all in the village.

Among others it reached the ears of Mr. Blank, a young gentleman who happened to reside at Duddingstone, and who took an interest in the fortunes of Robin. Mr. Blank (unknown to the villagers) was connected with the press of Edinburg, particularly with a certain newspaper, one copy of which had an extensive circulation in Duddingstone. First of all, the newspaper reached Mr. Blank on the Saturday of its publication: on Monday it fell into the hands of Robin, who like the rest of his trade, had most leisure on that day to peruse it; on Tuesday the baker had it; on Wednesday, the tailor; on Thursday, the blacksmith; on Friday, the gardener; and on Saturday, the barber, in whose shop it lay till the succeeding Saturday brought another. Mr. Blank soon got from Robin's own mouth all the particulars of the lottery ticket purchase, even to the very number, which was seventeen hundred and fifty-seven, a number chosen by Robin, who had an eye to fatalism, as being the date of the year in which he was born.

A love of mischief or sport suggested to the young gentleman the wicked thought of making the newspaper a means of hoaxing Robin regarding the lottery ticket.—We shall not undertake to defend Mr. Blank's conduct, even on the score of his being, as he was, a very young man. The experiment he made was cruel, although we believe it was done without malignity, and with every resolution that Robin should not be a loser by it. About the time when news of the lottery drawing was expected, the following paragraph appeared in the newspaper with which Mr. Blank was connected.

"By private accounts from London, we understand that nine hundred and eighty-four, and seventeen hundred and fifty-seven, are the numbers drawn in the present lottery for the two twenty thousand pound prizes. We know not if any of these lucky numbers have been disposed of in this quarter."

Poor Robin came for his newspaper at the usual time, and in his usual manner. He got his customary glass, but missed his customary "bother" with Mr. Blank, who chose for the present to be out of the way. Home he trudged, carrying the newspaper, the harbinger of his fortune, in the crown of his hat—placed himself on his stool—drew out his spectacles—and began to read as usual, from the beginning of the first page. It was some time before he reached the paragraph big with his fate. When he saw it, he gave a gasp—took off his spectacles and began to rub them, as if doubtful that they had deceived him—placed them again deliberately on his nose—read the passage over again, slowly and surely—then quietly laying his hand on a shoe which he had been mending, and which contained a last, made it in a moment spin through the window, carrying the casement with it. His wife, Janet, was not at home, so, rushing out of doors, he made his way to his old haunt, at the sign of the Sheep's Head. The landlady held up her hands at his wild looks

"Send for barber Hughie," he cried, "and Neil the tailor; and I say Luckie, bring—let me see—a gallon o' your best; and some cheese—a hall cheese—nane o' your halfs and quarters."

"Guide us, Robin! What bee's this in your bonnet? The man's gyte!"

"Look there, woman, at the papers.—I've gotten a prize. A twenty thousand pounder. What's the sixteenth of that, think ye?"

"A prize and nae blank! Eh, wow, Robin, gie's a shake o' your hand. I aye said ye wad come to something. Isy, my dear, rin for the barber—and Neil—if he's sober—and bring the gudeman, too. The mair the merrier."

Robin was soon surrounded by all his cronies of the village; for the news of his good fortune spread with the rapidity of scandal. Innumerable were the shakings of hands, and pledges of good will and assistance. The Sheep's Head soon became too hot for the company; the village itself was in an uproar; and as halloo followed halloo, Mr. Blank inwardly "shrunk at the sound himself had made." Meanwhile, to have the truth of the statement confirmed, a superannuated lawyer had been dispatched to Edinburg; and his return with the intelligence that all was a hoax, spread dismay over the faces of the carousors, and made Robin's heart sink with grief and shame.

A speedy change took place in the conduct of those fair weather friends who had flocked around the poor cobbler. From being the admired of all beholders, he became an object of scorn and laughter, till, unable to stand their mocks und gibes, he rushed from their presence, and sought shelter under his own bedclothes. The only one who stood true was Neil the tailor.—He followed Robin to his own house—took him by the hand, and said, "Robin, my man, I promised you a suit o' clothes o' the best. I ken ye wad hae befriended me had ye got the cash—and—lottery or no lottery—by Jove! I'll keep my word."

Mr. Blank took care to discharge the debt incurred at the Sheep's Head, and endeavored by proffers of money and otherwise, to comfort Robin, and atone in some measure for the injury which he had secretly done him. But Robin turned himself in bed and would not be comforted. Three days he lay in this plight, when authentic information arrived of the drawing of the lottery. Robin's number was, after all, in reality a lucky one—not, indeed, twenty thousand, but five thousand pounds. The sixteenth of even this was a little fortune to him, and he received it with sober satisfaction, very different from the boisterous glee which he had formerly.—"I'll seek nane o' them this time," he said to his wife, Janet—"except Neil the tailor; he, puir body, was the only true hearted creature amang a'. I've learn't a lesson by what has taken place. I can wha to trust."

A STRAGETIC LANDLORD.—A Chicago paper states that a man in the West Division owned a house—which he tenanted out on a mere parole or a verbal lease.—The period of the tenantcy expired and the tenant was notified to vacate. The tenant paid no attention to the several notices. The owner found (as all owners who let houses without a written lease may find) that without nearly as much trouble and expense as the house was worth, he could not get his tenant out.

In this dilemma he hit upon a stragetic expedient. He read in the papers how Gen. Grant had "cut off the enemy's communications" at Vicksburg, thus placcing him in a situation where, as soon as his supplies were exhausted, he must surrender at discretion. Our West Side landlord resolved to cut off his tenant's communications.

He employed a house mover, and requested him to bring an extra supply of blocks, and commenced raising the building. When he had raised it about four feet from the ground the tenant called a parley. The owner said "Move," the tenant said "No." House-raiser went on with his work. The next morning the tenant found his front door about eighteen feet above the surface of the earth, and no front stairway. It was an elevation from which to jump would be dangerous. He called for a ladder. "Move." The tenant looked down sadly at the beautiful earth spread out beneath him, and agreed to move. A ladder was brought, down which the tenant and his household goods descended.

A CUTE TRICK.—A dandy was recently walking under the arcades of the Rue de Rivoil, in Paris, holding in his hand a gold-headed cane of splendid workmanship. A man supported by two crutches came up, and asked for alms in a pitiful tone. The dandy, moved to pity, gave the beggar a small silver coin. At the same moment, a person near him suddenly exclaimed: "How can you, sir, allow this rogue to deceive you? Please to lend me your cane, and I will show you that the rascal runs better than I can.' The dandy without reflecting, lent his cane; the beggar, the moment he perceived it in his detractor's hands, threw away his crutches and took to his heels, and was followed by the man with the cane, whilst the spectators, and the dandy particularly, remained in convulsions of laughter at the sight, and exclaiming alternately, "Oh, he will be caught!"—"No, he will not be caught!" But both the racing heroes disappeared at the next turning in the street, and their victim remained waiting for his splendid cane, which cost five hundred francs.

WHO WOULD BE A GOAT?—An "old salt," who had been on a bender, had got what might be termed "sublimely mistified," by his frequent imbibings of the critter. Staggering along the streets he thought to go to a theater, and pass the remainder of the evening. Following some men, whom he thought were bound on the same voyage, he found himself in what he took to be the pit, but it happened to be a meeting house, and the minister was preaching from the text, wherein is mentioned the sheep and goats; and, in order to make an impression upon his congregation, he put the significant question: "Who would be a goat?" and paused; and then, with still greater emphasis, asked: "Who would be a goat?"

Our tipsy sailor could not brook the delay, and at once responded:

"As no body else (hic) will be it, I'll be the (hic) goat, rather (hic) than the play should stop."

CHARACTER IS POWER.—It is often said that knowledge is power, and this is true. Skill or faculty of any kind carries within superiority. So, to a certain extent, wealth is power, and rank is power, and genius has a transcendent gift of mastery over men. But higher, purer and better than all, more consistent in its influence and more lasting in its sway, is the power of character—power which emanates from a pure and lofty mind.—Take any community, and who is the man of most influence? To whom do all look up with reverence? Not the smartest man, nor the cleverest politician, nor the most brilliant talker, but he who in a long course of years tried by the extremes of prosperity and adversity, has approved himself to the judgment of his neighbors, and all who have seen his life, as worthy to be called wise and good.

PROFIT AND LOSS.

As an unscrupulous fellow named Ben was coming down one morning, he met Tom, and stopped him.

"I say, Tom," he said, "here's a pretty good counterfeit three. If you pass it, I'll divide."

"Let's see the plaster," said Tom; and after examining it carefully, put it in his vest pocket, remarking:

"It is an equal division—a dollar and a half a piece?"

"Yes," said Ben.

"All right," said Tom.

And off he went.

A few minutes afterward, he quietly stepped into the store of his friend Ben, and purchased a can of oysters for a dollar and a half, laying down the three dollars for them. The clerk looked at the bill rather doubtingly; when his suspicions were immediately calmed by Tom, who said:

"There is no use in looking, for I received the note from Ben himself not ten minutes ago."

Of course the clerk, with this assurance, forked the dollar and a half in change; with this deposit and a can of oysters Tom left. Shortly afterward he met Ben, who asked him if he had passed the note.

"Oh, yes," said Tom at the same time passing over the dollar and a half to Ben.

That evening, when Ben made up his cash account, he was surprised to find the same old counterfeit three in the drawer. Turning to his locum tenans, he asked:

"Where did you get this cursed note? Didn't you know it was counterfeit?"

"Why," said the clerk, "Tom gave it to me, and I suspected it was fishy; but he said he had just received it from you, and I took it."

The thing had penetrated the wool of Ben. With a particular grin, he muttered. "Sold!" and charged the can of oysters to profit and loss acocunt

AN ANCIENT LOVE STORY.—A very curious love story is told by several ancient writers, respecting Egirvard, a secretary to Charlemagne, and a daughter of that emperor. The secretary fell in love with the princess, who at length allowed him to visit her. One winter's night he staid with her very late, and in the meantime a deep snow had fallen. If he left, his footmarks would be observed, and yet to stay would expose him to danger. At length the princess resolved to carry him on her back to a neighboring house, which she did. It happened, however, that from the window of his bedroom the emperor saw the whole affair. In the assembly of the Lords, the following day, when Egirvard and his daughter were present, he asked what ought to be done to a man who compelled a king's daughter to carry him on her shoulders, through frost and and snow, in the middle of a winter's night. They answered that he was worthy of death. The lovers were alarmed; but the Emperor addressing Egirvard, said: "Hadst thou loved my daughter, thou shouldst have come to me; thou art worthy of death, but I give thee two lives. Take thy fair porter in marriage, fear God, and love one another."

BIRDS IN BATTLE.—The battle of Murfreesboro was fought in a wooded and thinly settled country. The wild animals of the forest were frightened by the storm and shot of the loud roar of the great guns. The men were lying behind a crest waiting. A brace of frantic wild turkeys, so paralized with fright that they were incapable of flying, ran between the lines and endeavored to hide among the men.—But the frenzy among the turkeys was not so touching as the exquisite fright of the birds and rabbits. When the roar of battle rushed through the cedar thickets, flocks of little birds fluttered and circled above the field in a state of utter bewilderment and scores of rabbits fled for protection to our men lying down in line on the left, nestling under their coats and creeping under their legs in a state of utter distraction. They hopped over the field like toads and as perfectly tamed by fight as household pets. Many officers witnessed it, remarking it as one of the most curious spectacles ever seen upon a battle field.

DELICATE DESSERT.—Lay half a dozen crackers in a tureen, pour on enough boiling water to cover them. In a few minutes they will be swollen to three or four times their original size. Now grate loaf sugar and a little nutmeg over them, and dip on enough sweet cream to make a nice sauce, and you will have a simple and delicious dessert that will rest lightly on your stomach—and it is easily prepared. Leave out the cream, and it is a valuable receipt for "sick room cookery."

☞ "Well what next?" said Mrs. Partington, as she interrupted Ike, who was reading the war news—"The pickets were driven in five miles! Bless my poor soul, but that will make a strong fence. I suppose they had to be driven in deep to keep the sessionaders from digging out under them."

EXTRAORDINARY JOURNEY BY A CAT.—A wonderful instance of feline affection occurred a short time ago. A person named Marsh Allen, residing at Wiloughton, England, who is in a very delicate state of health, went to Hull to put himself under medical treatment, leaving his cat, which was under twelve months old, at Wiloughton. One day after he had been there some time, happening to go in the back-yard of the house at which he was staying, he observed a cat sitting on the outer wall. He earnestly called "pussy," when the animal, to his great surprise, jumped from the wall, rushed upon his shoulders and into his bosom, commenced licking his face, and exhibiting every other evidence of delight and affection of which it was capable. He at once perceived that it was his own cat, which he had left safely at Wiloughton; and his astonishment at the startling fact may be readily imagined. On examining the animal he found that its claws were completely worn off with walking and that it presented other apperances of having undergone great fatigue, hardship and hunger. How it succeeded in crossing the Humber, or indeed in performing the journey (about fifty miles) at all, must now remain a mystery. It may be mentioned as partly accounting for this violent affection shown by this poor member of the feline race, that Allen was very fond of the animal, and, in his sickness, had been in the habit of taking it to bed with him.

☞ QUITE EVEN.—A good story is told of a showman, who carried about on exhibition an enormous bear. In a certain town in Vermont, where Bruin was attracting crowds, dwelt a farmer and his wife, and an interesting and multitudinous family of twenty children. The pater familiar was very desirous of gratifying the commendable curiosity of his offspring; but the price of admission to the show was one shilling, and that, multiplied by the number of his olive plants, was too much for his exchequer. He therefore approached the showman, and after some parley concluded a bargain, by which the latter agreed to drive into the farmer's back yard with Bruin's cage, and give a private exhibition to the entire family for one dollar. This was done, to the great delight of the old folks and the children, when the farmer proffered the compensatory dollar to the obliging showman.—"Oh, no!" said the latter, "I can't take anything; it is no more a sight for your family to see my bear, than for my bear to see your family."

STACKING ARMS.—The following good story is told of Gen John A. Logan:

When he was a Colonel, at the commencement of the rebellion, six companies of his corps becoming aggrieved at something, stacked arms and refused to do duty. The adjutant informed Colonel Logan of the difficulty, who, upon hearing it, exclaimed, "Stacked arms! The devil they have!" Then pausing a minute, as he considered the emergency, he continued: "Well, adjutant, I'll give 'em enough of stacking arms." Accordingly he formed the remaining four companies in line, with loaded muskets, and stood them over the malcontents, whom he compelled to stack and unstack arms for twelve hours. They did'nt want to stack arms after that without special orders.

THE MEMORY OF A MOTHER.—When temptation appears, and we are almost persuaded to do wrong, how often a mother's word of warning will call to mind vows that are really broken. Yes, the memory of a mother has saved many a poor wretch from going astray. Tall grass may be growing over the hallowed spot where all her earthly remains repose; the dying leaves of autumn may be whirled over it, or the white mantle of winter may cover it from sight; yet the spirit of her, when he walks in the right path, appears, and gently, softly, mournfully calls to him when wandering off into the ways of error.

HONEYMOON.—The word "Honeymoon" is traceable to Teutonic origin. Among the Teutons was a favorite drink, called "Metheglin." It was made of mead and honey, and was like that of European countries. These honeyed drinks were used more especally at marriage festivals, which were kept up among the nobility one lunar month, the festive board being well supplied with metheglin. "Honah moon" signified the moon or moonath of the marriage festival. Alaric the Goth, celebrated by Southey's poem, died on his wedding night, from too free indulgence in the honeyed drink.

THE DRAFT.

The following is a complete list of the conscripts from this county, drawn at Huntingdon, on Saturday last. A number of the names are misspelled, owing, we presume, to inaccuracies or bad writing on the part of the enrolling officers. The drawing was conducted by the Provost Marshal and Draft Commissioner, assisted by Samuel McCamant and Robt. A. McMurtrie, Republicans, and Thad. Banks and John Creswell, Democrats, as the committee from this county to witness the drawing.

HEAD QUARTERS CO. M. 62nd P. V.,
Camp near Beverley Ford, Virginia.
August 18th, 1862.

MESSRS EDITORS:—Having a few moments leisure this morning, I will occupy some of them in writing to you, to inform you that some of us are still in the land of the living, healthy and strong, but a little the worse for exposure. We have 32 men here at present, 23 of them for duty, 2 on extra or daily duty, and 2 sick. We have also 5 men absent detailed as clerks, also 15 absent in hospitals from wounds received in action and sickness. Our aggregate strength, present and absent, is one officer and 52 men. Since entering the service, August 9th 1863, we have had 2 officers killed in action, and 24 men discharged for wounds and disability, the majority being wounds.

For information, I will give you an account of company M's doings, commencing July 1st, 1863. Arriving at Union Mills, on the 30th of June, at 6 o'clock P. M., we pitched our tents and prepared for a coming storm, which was visible in the distance, and in a short time came upon us in all its force. The rain poured down in torrents and continued until late at night, flooding many a poor fellows tent, who had not the forethought to ditch it. On the morning of July 1st we were awakened by the bugle sounding "pack up." Immediately all were bustling and hurrying to get ready. Shortly after "forward" was sounded and with "knapsacks on our shoulders and bayonets by our side," we pulled out on the road leading to Hanover, distance 9½ miles. About six miles from Union Mills, we crossed the Pennsylvania line, when immediately the Pennsylvania boys gave cheer after cheer for the "Old Keystone," assisted by regiments from other states. Our drummers commenced playing and continued doing so for many miles along the road. I never seen the men in better spirits than at that time, as cheer after cheer echoed along the columns. Farmers with their families came flocking to the roadside, cheering in return, and encouraging us on our way. Especially was this the case with the ladies, whose encouragement was something in the shape of eatables of which we were not backward in partaking. From nearly every house along the road could be seen the Stars and Stripes floating to the breeze, an unusual sight for us, for never was it seen waving in Virginia, from house or hamlet. Another cheering sight was to see the pleasant smiling faces of the ladies and others, along our line of march, nerving our arms with additional strength, and many a weary soldier started forward with renewed vigor. During our many months campaign in Virginia, we have received nothing but frowns and curses from all sides, males and females. Passing through towns or Villages in Virginia, every thing looks gloomy, deserted and cheerless. All houses and stores are closed. No kind smiles greet our faces there.—No kind voice to cheer the wearied soldier on his way, or offer him a cup of cooling water.

Arriving at Hanover Pa., we halted two hours to rest and cook a lunch. At 7 o'clock P. M. we started for Gettysburg, distant 14 miles. We marched very briskly untill midnight, when we stopped, in a strip of woods, three miles from Gettysburg. Being fatigued we spread our blankets and laid down. Some made fires and cooked supper or 12 o'clock piece. At three o'clock next morning when the bugle sounded reville, we arose cooked and eat our breakfast, consisting of hard tack and coffee. After breakfast we had inspection of arms and ammunition. By this time daylight was fast dawning. The bugle sounding "forward," we were soon in line and started off, arriving with the rest of the army near Gettysburg. Each corps having came a different road, we maneuvered around till 12 o'clock, before getting into position, when our corps (5) was massed on the side of a hill near the town. While resting here we supplied ourselves with ammunition.

About 4 o'clock P. M. we were ordered forward, and taken to the left of our line, near the foot of Round Top mountain, where the third corps was fighting, and being too hard pressed, called for reinforcements, and our brigade (2) of our division, then numbering three regiments, 4th Michigan, 32d Massachusetts and 62d Penn'a, was ordered to take the first line of battle while the 1st and 3d brigades formed the 2d line as reserve. We advanced into a strip of woods bordered by a wheat field on the left, and on the right by a cleared field. Forming our line, our left on the wheat field, in our front was a swamp about 50 yards wide, and woods again on the oppsite side. We had hardly formed our line, ere the rebels, under Longstreet and McLaw, came yelling like so many devils, through the woods on our front, up to the edge of the swamp. I saw that they were massed by regiments as if determined to break through our line. As soon as they appeared in view we opened a galling fire upon them, they returning the compliment with a will. Our men stood to the work bravely, never yielding an inch, and firing and loading as coolly as if they were on drill. The rebels turned and fled in disorder, leaving their wounded and dead behind. We did not follow them, but kept our position for a while, until relieved by fresh troops. We were then taken to the rear of the wheat field, where we formed anew. The regulars of our corps then advanced through the wheat field, and again drove the enemy back with considerable loss on both sides. But things were not to last long this way. Again that "yell" (which was heard so often at Chancellorville) commenced, and made us grasp our pieces with firmer grips. "Attention" and "forward" passed along the line, and we advanced across the wheat field and formed behind a stone wall. We were hardly posted behind the wall, before the word was passed that we were flanked on the right of our brigade, which we soon found to be too true, for the bullets commenced flying in among us from the right. We remained in our position until the order came "about face," when we walked out in good order, contending with the enemy both in front and rear, they having nearly surrounded us. For a time it was a hand to hand engagement, muskets were clubbed, and pistols and sabers were used in the scuffle.—Our regiment lost one of its colors, both color barers being wounded and bayoneted. The 4th Michigan, on the right of the brigade, lost its colors, their Col. being killed in trying to save them. Half the regiment was taken prisoners. We continued falling back antill we came to the edge of the wheat field, where we halted and formed again, under a heavy fire of the enemy in front. At this moment the Pennsylvania Reservs charged on the rebels who were pressing us, driving them back for the third time, leaving dead and wounded in our hands. They did not try this point any more that day, but tried the right of our line but met with the same success as here. During the last engagement our brigade suffered severely, the three rigiments losing 34 officers killed, wounded and missing, and 582 enlisted men.—Our regiment lost 5 officers killed and 9 wounded. Among them was Major Loury, who was shot through the head while cheering us on. We also had 21 men killed, 124 wounded, and 78 missing. The casualties in our company were Capt. Murray, wounded in the wrist severely; Leint. Morris, in head, mortally, since dead; Corpl. S. Herr, in foot, slightly; Corpl. J. C. Swyers, in knee, severely; Walter P. Byers, in hip, severely; Richard Lenihan, in hand, slightly, Matthew Stineman, hip, severly; R. N. Martin, 1st Sergt., missing, supposed prisoner. The 4th Michigan lost nearly all their officers killed or prisoners. The 32d Massachusetts lost heavily. Their Lieut. Col. was wounded, mortally in the head. This evening details were made from each regiment to go out on the battle field to get the wounded, and carry them back and also to bring the dead. The wheat field above named presented a horrible spectacle. The ground was covered with dead and wounded. The moans of the wounded were dreadful to hear. Nearly all of them were taken back to hospitals that were inside our lines. Next morning, Friday 3d, the firing was continued all along the line, but the heavy firing was on the right of our line, near Cemetery Hill. About 10 o'clock in the morning very heavy cannonading commenced on both sides, the most terrific I have ever seen. There was a continual hissing and buzzing for an hour or two. I did not learn the extent of the damage done by this cannonading. We continued behind our breast works all day (Friday 3) also Saturday 4th, the enemy making no advance on the line in front of us. Continuous skirmishing was kept up all day by our sharp shooters. Sometimes when our men would make it too hot for them they would send a shell at them, but never done any harm. On the evening of the 4th, the enemy retreated, followed closely by our forces. Our corps moved out of their entrenchments at 5 o'clock P. M. on Sunday the 5th, taking the pike leading through Emmettsburg. From this time we marched continually day after day, in all kinds of weather. On the 8th we crossed the Cotocton mountain, on the 9th South mountain and on the 12th we came in contact with the enemies pickets near Williamsport. Skirmishing was kept up between our pickets until the 14th, when the enemies pickets falling back to their breast works, which they had erected to hold us in check, while they forded the river. These works were about a mile from the river. We also threw up breast works in case they should advance in force on us, and every evening as a new picket was posted it was advanced. Then a new line of works were erected. From deserters taken on the 14th we learned that the enemy were crossing the river. A division from each corps was sent forward and found the rumor correct. They had all crossed but about 500 who were taken prisoners. The whole army that night camped along the river. Next morning at 3 o'clock we were again roused up, and moved off towards Sharpsburg, thence to Berlin, where we crossed the Potomac river, and landed on the sacred soil of Virginia on the 17th July, it being just three weeks since we came from Virginia crossing the Potomac at Edwards Ferry, in persuit of Lee's army. Pushing on day after day, our cavalry moving ahead and occuping the gaps in the mountains, on the 23d July, the 3d corps had an engagement at Manassas gap, or Wapping heights Va., suported by our corps, which resulted in the defeat of the enemy and our occupying the gap. Again on the march, and August 8th we arrived at this place (Beverley Ford) and camped. None of our forces are on the other side of the river. Our pickets are stationed along the shore on this side while the enemies cavalry are visible on the other side, but at a great distance.

In conversation with a lady from this place, she told me that a week before our army came here, she went to Culpepper, to buy some flour. She bought a barrel for $44 in Confederate money, but it was hardly fit for use, she also gave the price of different other articles. Calico, which sells at home at 6 cents a yard, here brings $2,25. A sheet of pins $2,75. Whiskey, 7 dollars a pint, and scarce at that. A single meal at the hotel, when they have any thing to eat, is three dollars.

The boys are again recruiting strength, and do not look as if they had undergone a severe marching. They seem to be at present "gay and happy."

Letter from "August Sontag."

PHILADELPHIA, AUGUST 24th, 1863.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—What a great relief it is to us denizens of brick walls and marble fronts, when we hear the crash of the mammoth ferry gates as they close and shut us out from the long lines that mark the many diverging streets and the gleam of flickering gas-lights. When we pass the ferry gates it seems like leaving a world of noise for a world of silence. Let the soft gray night creep down upon the city, ever so quietly, from a faint twilight to a heavy set darkness, and yet the same tumult, the same tramp, tramp, of busy feet. The night of a city is not night, there is no darkness, no peace, no rest. High up against the sky you see windows flaring and reeking with light. The clangor of labors vulcanic arms is not hushed, there is still the ringing of bells and the buzz of whirling wheels. You change the scene when you have passed the gray "old man" who sits steadily at the gate, puffing slowly at his segar and thinking of, Heaven knows what, perhaps of his youthful roystering days, when Philadelphia had not yet lost her Quaker ascendency, or her "gable houses."—If you are a quiet, meditative man, steal forward on the ferry-boat and get your face into the cool night of the moon, and view the mammoth hulls of the vessels that ride at anchor in the offing, while the city seems like Venice, to sit.

"Steadfast and firm—embosomed in the sea," and as their lights gleam far, far down in the water, you will remember Uhland's song over the sunken cities, whose bells could be heard ring mournfully through the rippling waves in which they were buried. But if you are seeking comfort, as well as romance and fresh air, do as we have done, and take "Sontag's" word for it, you will not regret it. Take a trip over the Schuylkill and up the Pennsylvania Rail Road to the mountains; go to Ephrata, Altoona, Cresson, or to Bedford, and you will probably gain a hundred pounds We didn't gain so much, but came very near getting married.

We were, indeed, greatly pleased with Altoona and its inhabitants. It is a neat, tidy town, and we could not refrain from giving it the title of Lewis-ville in the East, and Lombaert-ville in the West. We notice that all the streets are called for the fair sex. This is no doubt accounted for by its being laid out by a ladies-man, whom our modesty forbids mentioning; yet we must say that we are as yet unable to decipher the true objec but conclude that the "Col." must have been in a brown study about the ladies, and yet in his bach- elor element. The Logan House, which is und- the management of D. R. Miller & Sons, is, with- out any exceptions, the most comfortable and d sirable house we have ever had the honor to st

The mellifluous sound of the gong naturall suggested an idea, and caused an inquiry to arise i our mind, whether we had yet partaken of our reg ular rations, and which invariably led to a nega tive answer and a sudden descent upon, and de mise of said viands. The only regulation we coul not get accustomed to was the Swiss bell-ringin about the hour when we were taking our last nap dreaming of little "Blossom," or a mess of the woodcock, shot by Miller, Laird, and Ferree—tha we didn't get—which for the time being, led us to think we were in a pastorial locality, and caused us to sigh for our summer clothes, fresh milk and new butter. Fortunately, we spent Sunday i Altoona, and upon special invitation of a friend, made a grand reconnoisance "over the way" to Rev. Oliver's church. The morning was indeed lovely, the air genial and invigorating, and pro ductive of good health. We saluted the littl Gothic sanctuary with reverential awe, and we hav no reason to regret our walk, as everything con nected with the performance was of a most agree able character. We had not been seated lon when the church was filled with people of a mo respectable appeance. Young ladies of surprisin beauty and refinement, marched stately down th aisle, while stiff and dignified young men sauntere leisurely into their respective pews. At the usu hour for commencing the morning service, the me lodeon poured forth its inspiring tones, the last which finished a most admirable voluntary, bo in point of composition and execution. The choi we notice, is composed principally of members one of the first families of Altoona, and we a pleased to see those young members of this fami take an active part in the service, and so devot to the church. The principal tenor has a ve sweet, clear, and well cultivated voice. She rea well, and although her voice is not very powerfu she sings with much expression and feeling. H notes of the lower register being remarkably fu round and mellifluous. The alto was very fi and its gifted possessor uses it to great advantag The basso appears to be a good musician but see afraid to let out his voice The music selected w very pretty, its principal beauty consisted in i simplicity. The only regret we have—being pa sionately fond of music—is that we can not ca the recollection away in our note-book to con o and drink in at our leisure. Bishop Stevens, this city, delivered an excellent oration. It w bright, deep and theological. In the evening visited the United Presbyterian Church, and he an able discourse by the Rev. J. Anderson of C ifornia. The choir in this church is also good However, I cannot form a correct idea, as som its members were absent. The rich, full tone the lady vocalists have a rival in the mellow t of one of the sweetest tenors we have heard long time.

But to return to my first subject, it seems stra at first sight, that people exist in this world, [illegible] our camp, which resulted in the defeat [illegible] and our occupying the gap. Again [illegible] and August 8th we arrived at this [illegible] Ford and camped. None of [illegible] on the other side of the River. The only regret we have—being passionately fond of music—is that we can not carry [illegible] in our note-book to run over [illegible] at our leisure. Bishop Stevens, of [illegible] delivered an excellent sermon. It was [illegible] and [illegible]. In the evening we [illegible] the United Presbyterian Church, and heard [illegible] discourse by the Rev. J. Anderson of [illegible]. The full, [illegible] tones of [illegible] have a rival in the mellow tones [illegible] the sweetest tenors we have heard in a [illegible] time.

[illegible] to my first subject, it seems strange, [illegible] that people exist in this world, who [illegible] the summer to go on year after year enduring martyrdom at Saratoga, Newport, or Long Branch, and never attempting to "change their spots."—But the imagined damnation of fashion's followers is not [illegible] a matter of wonder.—There are people who know what summer is, what nature is, and how to thoroughly enjoy both, and these are they, who early depart for some delightful, quiet spot, there to pass four or five months in the woods, and to return strengthened in body and mind, for the wear and tear of the city again. I always had this theory concerning country life, that to enjoy it, you must first live in the city, and for this reason, that one who grows up among the mountains and the villages, finds his perceptions of their beauties [illegible] deadened, while to one that comes into their presence for the first time, they are new and glorious revelations, clothed in [illegible] grandeur and loveliness. The woods, particularly, are a never failing source of delight to a summer rover, for they offer such an endless variety of objects, both charming and strange.—Who has not felt the calm happiness which is experienced when, after a long ramble through the silent old forest, we find ourselves seated on the mossy bank of a beautiful brook with interweaving branches over our heads, and the soft rippling water lulling the senses to rest, as if it a music for resting. These quiet little nooks are just the places, and our "Mill on the Floss" will be dearer than ever to us, when we associate the music of the author's thoughts with that of the brook and the many sounds of the wood. Near Cresson the genuine disciple of Isaac Walton finds ample enjoyment for his leisure days in following the mountain streams fishing for trout. Those who have been in the woods afar from human habitation, where all is lonely and quiet, and almost awe inspiring, will not wonder that the poet said, "The groves were God's first temples." The undergrowth of the Allegheny mountains is altogether on a most wonderful luxuriance, and presents at every step some new beauty, so that we can never be at a loss for amusement and pleasure, especially if we are fortunate enough to possess that almost indispensable pocket-companion—a microscope. Then the views which suddenly reward the rambler, when, after some toilsome ascent, he pauses to take breath and beholds spread out before him a broad fertile valley, surrounded by hills and chequered by fields of different tints, dotted here and there by little cottages, or [illegible] the more extended scene. Hollidaysburg and other villages may be seen in the vast plain below. With such entertainments, one loses the recollection of all mean things and becomes, at least for the time, better and purer. Peacefulness is like a healing balm, the [illegible] of worldliness is driven from our minds, and we are new creatures. The [illegible] is a sweet relief to the great [illegible] and [illegible] the grandeur of city life. Indeed as far as I can see all the advantages seem to be on the side of a country summer resort, and in opposition [illegible] where [illegible] style. The girls dress themselves in their best, making a point of it, and then [illegible] themselves in purpose to be lonely and [illegible]. [illegible] it is possible that they think they are happy, but I know better. Contrast the faces of the returned pleasure seeker just from Saratoga, Cape May and such, with one who has been to Cresson and breathed the mountain air, lived a good country life, and comes back a living testimony of the invigorating influences of pure air and mountain water. I also had a fine time out to Bedford, accompanied by a friend of amiable disposition and winning manners, and enjoyed myself very much. As I have already trespassed upon your columns, I shall not at this time tell you any thing in regard to my return trip, except that I very unexpectedly came down via Reading. I shall soon give you some jottings along the Hudson and in the Catskill mountains, a trip I purpose taking, accompanied by my little friend "Blossom."

Yours Truly,

AUGUST SONTAG.

Altoona Tribune.

ALTOONA, PA.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1863.

As will be seen by reference to the list of conscripts from Altoona, the Senior of this paper has received an invitation to Uncle Sam's balls, a series of which are to come off in the Southern States, during the ensuing winter, should the Southerners still continue to dance up to the music. As attendance upon such entertainments is frequently unhealthy, it would be well to have a general settling up of accounts, therefore all who know themselves indebted to the firm, and are not in the same boat with the Senior, should feel themselves under obligations to square up at once. Should we decline Uncle Samuel's invitation, and conclude to stay at home, all know it costs more than country printers generally have about them, to get Uncle S. to accept the declination. Walk along, gentlemen and let us have the "greenbacks."

FROM THE WEST.—The news from Burnside and Rosecrans is to the effect that they are moving in conjunction, and that the former is at Knoxville and the latter bombarding Chattanooga. Recent cavalry raids in Mississippi and Alabama, have succeeded in destroying a great amount of railroad property and completely cutting off rebel communications.

A daring band of guerillas, under Quantrell, recently entered Lawrence, Kansas, and after sacking the town, taking all the money in the banks, all the jewelry and money in private houses, and killing a number of citizens, they burned the place. Loss estimated at $2,000,000.

SUDDEN DEATH.—This community was shocked on Saturday morning last, by the announcement of the death of Mrs. Dr. J. M. Gemmill, formerly Mrs. Dr. C. J. Hirst, which occurred about two o'clock on that morning. She had retired at eleven o'clock the previous evening, in her usual health and in fine spirits. About twelve o'clock a brass band called to serenade the Doctor, and about the same time he was called away to see a patient. After the Doctor left, Mrs. G. arose and called her niece into her room to hear the music and they sat down at the window. When the band had finished playing, her niece turned to speak to her and observed something unusual in her appearance. Mrs. G. left her seat at the window and threw herself upon the bed. Her niece approached her and asked her whether she was suffering, and she replied "very severely." The next door was called in and a messenger despatched for the Doctor. The Doctor arrived in a few minutes, but Mrs. G. was insensible. All remedies which affection and medical skill could suggest were unavailing, and a devoted wife, a consistent christian, and a kind neighbor passed from earth to her reward. The Doctor pronounced her disease [illegible].

The list of conscripts and the long letters of our young friend J. R. Garden, of the 62d Pa. Vols., and the ever welcome "August Sontag," have crowded out our usual variety, local and otherwise. The conscription list is the all absorbing topic at present, therefore it is hardly necessary to make any excuse. The rush to get copies of our extra, issued on Saturday evening last, may be imagined, when we state that we sold over one thousand copies in less than two hours. When it was known that we had commenced to strike off the extras, the crowd in the office became so great that it was with the utmost difficulty that we could work the press, and nothing would induce the people to leave until they were supplied.

FROM CHARLESTON.—The news through sources, both loyal and rebel, indicate that at this time Fort Sumter, and perhaps the [illegible] of treason, Charleston, are in the possession of Gen. Gilmore and the victorious army. The rebel news indirectly admit that Fort Sumter must surrender, as her walls are being hammered down, and although they proclaim that they will fight through Charleston street by street, they consider it a gone goose, and say that the Yankees will only land in its blackened and charred ruins. But they were always spunky down about Charleston. May be the Yankees will not give them time to burn it.

CAVALRY COMPANY.—By reference to an advertisement in another column, it will be seen that Capt. J. M. Bell has received authority to recruit a company to be attached to the 12th Penn'a cavalry. Here is a chance for the drafted men in these parts, who intend entering the service, to go in as volunteers and have a voice in the selection of their officers and stand a fair chance for promotion.

Our thanks are due the members of the band attached to the [illegible] Regt. P. V. M., for a serenade on Friday night last. We [illegible]. The music composed of [illegible] pieces [illegible]. May [illegible].

GREAT REMEDY

FOR RHEUMATISM, GOUT, NEURALGIA, LUMBAGO, STIFF NECK AND JOINTS, SPRAINS, BRUISES, CUTS AND WOUNDS, PILES, HEADACHE, AND ALL RHEUMATIC AND NERVOUS DISORDERS.

For all of which it is a speedy and certain remedy, and never fails. This Liniment is prepared from the recipe of Dr. Stephen Sweet, of Connecticut, the famous bone setter, and has been used in his practice for more than twenty years with the most astonishing success.

AS AN ALLEVIATOR OF PAIN, it is unrivalled by any preparation before the public, of which the most skeptical may be convinced by a single trial.

This Liniment will cure rapidly and radically, RHEUMATIC DISORDERS of every kind, and in thousands of cases where it has been used it has never been known to fail.

FOR NEURALGIA, it will afford immediate relief in every case, however distressing.

It will relieve the worst cases of HEADACHE in three minutes and is warranted to do it.

TOOTHACHE also will it cure instantly.

FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY AND GENERAL LASSITUDE arising from imprudence or excess, this Liniment is a most happy and unfailing remedy. Acting directly upon the nervous tissues, it strengthens and revivifies the system, and restores it to elasticity and vigor.

FOR PILES.—As an external remedy, we claim that it is the best known, and we challenge the world to produce an equal. Every victim of this distressing complaint should give it a trial, for it will not fail to afford immediate relief, and in a majority of cases will effect a radical cure.

QUINSY AND SORE THROAT are sometimes extremely malignant and dangerous, but a timely application of this Liniment will never fail to cure.

SPRAINS are sometimes very obstinate, and enlargement of the joints is liable to occur if neglected. The worst case may be conquered by this Liniment in two or three days.

BRUISES, CUTS, WOUNDS, SORES, ULCERS, BURNS AND SCALDS, yield readily to the wonderful healing properties of DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT, when used according to directions. Also, CHILBLAINS, FROSTED FEET, AND INSECT BITES AND STINGS.

Spavin and Ringbone may be easily prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a radical cure. THE Early Physical Degeneracy of AMERICAN PEOPLE.

JUST PUBLISHED BY DR. A. STONE

Physician to the Troy Lung and Hygienic Institute.

A Treatise on the Causes of Early Physical decline of American People: the cause of Nervous Debility, Consumption and Marasmus.

This work is one of high moral tone, written in chaste, yet thrilling language, and appeals directly to the moral consciousness of ALL PARENTS and Guardians especially, detailing scientific and reliable aids and treatment for cure.

It will be sent by mail on the receipt of two (3 cent) Stamps.

☞ Parents and Guardians! Fail not to send and obtain this book.

☞ Young men! Fail not to send and get this book.

☞ Ladies! You too should at once secure a copy of this book.

A Word of Solemn Conscientious Advice to those who will reflect.

A class of maladies prevail to a fearful extent in the community, dooming at least 100,000 youth of both sexes annually to an early grave. Those diseases are very imperfectly understood. Their external manifestation, or symptoms are Nervous Debility, Relaxation and Exhaustion; Marasmus or wasting and consumption of the tissues of the whole body; shortness of breathing or hurried breathing on ascending a hill or flight of stairs; great palpitation of the Heart; Asthma, Bronchitis and sore Throat; shaking of the Hands and limbs; aversion to society and to business or study; dimness of eye sight, loss of Memory, dizziness of the Head, Neuralgia, pain in various parts of the body; Pains in the back or limbs, Lumbago, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, irregularity of the bowels deranged secretions of the Kidneys and other glands of the body, as Leucorrhoea or Fleur Albus, &c. Likewise Epilepsy, Hysteria and Nervous Spasms.

Now in ninety-nine cases out of every one hundred, all of the above named disorders, and a host of others not named, as Consumption of the Lungs and that most insidious and wily form of consumption of the Spinal Nerves, known as Tabes Dorsales, and Tabes mesenterica have their seat and origin in diseases of the Pelvic Viscera. Hence the want of success on the part of old school practice in treating symptoms only.

Dr. Andrew Stone, Physician to the Troy Lung and Hygienic Institution, is now engaged in treating this class of modern maladies with the most astonishing success. The treatment adopted by the Institution is new; it is based upon scientific principles, with new discovered remedies, without minerals or poisons. The facilities of cure are such that patients can be cured at their homes, in any part of the country, from accurate descriptions of their case, by letter; and have the medicines sent by Mail or express. Printed interrogatories will be forwarded on application.

☞ Consumption, Catarrh and diseases of the throat cured as well at the Home of the Patients as at the Institution, by sending the Cold Medicated INHALING BALSAMIC VAPORS, with inhaler and ample directions for their use, and direct correspondence.

☞ Patients applying for interrogatives or advice, must enclose return stamps, to meet attention.

☞ The attending Physician will be found at the Institution for consultation, from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., each day. Sunday in the forenoon.

Address DR. ANDREW STONE.

JACOB SNYDER, TAILOR,

The Hero of One Hundred Fits per Month!

I would respectfully set forth my claim to public attention, as a Fashionable Tailor as follows:

Because I keep an excellent assortment of Cloths, Cassimeres, Vestings and Trimmings, which, when examined, always please.

Because my work is made up in a manner that takes down the country and gives all my customers a city appearance.

Because I am not inferior as a Cutter to the best to be found anywhere.

Because long experience in my business gives me entire control over it, and I am not dependant upon any one to lift me out of the suds.

Because I am still on the sunny side of forty, and therefore my taste as a Cutter and workman unimpaired.

Call on me, in the corner room of the "Brant House." Give me a trial and you will go away pleased.
